THE VISITOR to Montreal desiring to take in all the points of interest, has for many years depended on Alex. McGarr's Windsor Hotel Cab and Carriage Service, as well as his Special Tally-Ho Coaches, making four trips daily taking in all points and the Mount Royal Park. Each year comes around with increasing demand, for best means of conveyance for Sight-Seeing, the result being the placing this season, at the disposal of tourists and others, in addition to the Tally-Ho Coaches and Carriage Service, a splendidly equipped Automobile Tally-Ho (Kelly Car) with a comfortable seating capacity of about 30 persons, (see illustration). Four trips will be made daily leaving Windsor Hotel at 9 and 11 a.m. and 2 and 4 p. m. going about a two hour trip each journey, covering most of the points of interest, also a special trip to Dominion Park at 8 p. m.

Space is too limited to give more than a brief outline of Montreal and its points of interest.

The city lies in a very network of waters. Situated on an island, a very large one, it is true, but only one of many, there is water north, south, east and west. The St. Lawrence is in front, the Ottawa behind; above, to the southwest, is Lake St. Louis, and to the northwest the Lake of Two Mountains, and all their shores adjacent to the city are dotted with the villas and cottages of Montrealers. Beyond river and lake, on every side, roll away fertile plains, for this royal city is in the heart of what nature intended to be the garden of Canada. Yet, at the great limestone docks which line the water front of Montreal, ocean steamships of the largest size bring to the verge of this garden in the interior of the Dominion the odour of the salt sea.

¶ On the return trip the Sight Seeing Automobile Tally-Ho stops at Sellers-Gough Fur Co. Limited, the largest Exclusive Furriers in the British Empire, to give patrons an opportunity of visiting this handsome establishment. The Tally-Ho however, returns by way of the Hotel, so that visitors not wishing to alight at Sellers-Gough may proceed to the Windsor.

McGarr's Sight-Seein

In buildings the city possesses in McGill University, an educational institution equal to the best, and in the Royal Victoria College, a splendid school for women. Redpath Museum and Redpath Library are allied to McGill.

The Peel Street High School is next in importance. Eleven hundred and fifty students attend here daily. They begin with the kindergarten course and matriculate for the University.

Then there is the Aberdeen School for boys, with an average daily attendance of seven hundred and fiifty,

Laval University is the leading Catholic college. Here the French Canadians study law, theology, medecine and art.

The College of Montreal is also a French Catholic institution, occupying the historic site of the old "Fort de la Montagne." Two of the old towers still stand on the College grounds.

St. Mary's College for boys is conducted by the Jesuits, as is also Loyola College, on Drummond Street.

Automobile Tally-Ho

There are many other educational institutions conducted by the catholics in and around Montreal, including the beautiful Sacred Heart Convent at Sault au Recollet. The Royal Victoria Hospital is one of the best equipped, and most richly endowed institutions of the kind on the Continent.

Then there is the Montreal General Hospital and many excellent semi-private hospitals, also the Hotel Dieu and Western Hospital.

Notre Dame Church

Among the interesting and historic houses of worship are Christ Church Cathedral, the Scotch St. Andrew's, St. James Methodist, the American Presbyterian, St. George's Church, Erskine Presbyterian and the Jewish Synagogue.

Here also is the magnificent Notre Dame Church, with towers two hundred and twenty-seven feet high, and among its bells one that weighs over twelve tons.

This is the second largest church in America.

Then comes the imposing St. James Cathedral, whose great dome towers two hundred and fifty feet above the ground, the Cathedral is modeled after St. Peter's at Rome. There are, of course many other imposing churches where the Roman Catholics worship.

Scarcely of less interest than these great structures are many smaller ones some celebrated for their internal beauty, while others are the time-worn yet honored relics of past centuries, such as the quaint old church of Our Lady of Bonsecours.

The banks are numerous, and as Montreal is the "head office" of most of them, they occupy imposing buildings, as a rule, which add greatly to the architectural beauty of the city. The head office of the Bank of Montreal is one of the sights not to be overlooked.

There are in Montreal many picturesque, well kept public parks, chief among them being Mount Royal, rising to a height of nearly two thousand feet, overlooking the city and all the surrounding country.

(Take McGarr's Windsor Hotel Tally-Ho for the Mount Royal Drives.)

Among the old houses of history, perhaps the most interesting is the famous Chateau de Ramezay erected in 1705 by Claude de Ramezay, Governor of Montreal.
